

Hao Li and Pinscreen on Burning Man

Benjamin Davidson, on behalf of Li and Pinscreen, on October 15, 2020: “hedonistic”

Just look at the homepage of his website:

He is practically exposing himself to the world and quite obviously either attended, or wants everyone to think, that he attended Burning Man. That is out-of-state travel. Of course, after taking one look at that picture (which your client seems to believe defines him as a person), most prospective employers would probably decide there are better candidates. To put it mildly.

Plaintiff's claims of emotional distress. Obviously, serious questions arise as to whether someone who has the luxury of time and money to attend a hedonistic multi-day event like Burning Man can be said to be suffering economic harm, and it would be difficult to imagine

Ironically, this photograph from Burning Man 2014¹ was praised by Li prior to his fraudulent inducement of Sadeghi to join Pinscreen as its VP of Engineering in 2017.²
